Class Meets:

The class meets in 306 Rolfs Hall. The course also has an online component available through Canvas, the University of Florida's e-learning system.

Course Organization:

Within Canvas, the course is organized by weekly modules. The course homepage can be accessed 24 hours a day and contains everything you will need to complete this course, including: the syllabus, details for completion of every assignment, course information, tools for communicating with the instructor and other students, etc. A weekly learning module typically contains: 1) the topic and learning objectives for the week; 2) a list of assigned readings from your required textbook and/or additional sources; 3) case studies and/or lecture handouts that will be used during the live sessions; and 4) information about assignments and/or discussion questions that are due that week (see: "A note about on-line participation"). You can access the e-learning platform by directing your browser to elearning.ufl.edu and clicking on "Log in to e-Learning". When prompted, enter your Gatorlink ID and password to log in the system. You can learn more about using Canvas here: <https://elearning.ufl.edu/keep-learning/>. Please note that our class sessions may be audio visually recorded for students in the class to refer back and for enrolled students who are unable to attend in person.

Course Description:

The purpose of this graduate course is to provide an overview of the foundations and applications of mixed methods research (MMR). The course is designed to cover concepts relevant to the process of designing and conducting mixed methods and participatory research studies. The content, organization, and activities of the course will be equally valuable for students with a significant experience in quantitative and/or qualitative research than to students with little or no experience in research.

Objectives:

Upon completing the course, students will be able to conceptualize and carry out high quality MMR that integrate diverse methodologies and methods, including participatory approaches. Specifically, students will be able to...

- value the contributions of MMR to the understanding of the social world.
- understand the philosophical, theoretical, and historical evolution of MMR.
- explain the characteristics and fundamental concepts of MMR.
- apply critical thinking skills to make an informed decision regarding the appropriateness of using MMR to answer a given research question.
- compare and contrast different MMR designs.
- set up and conduct rigorous MMR studies.
- utilize a variety of participatory methods in research.

Required Textbook and Readings:

Students are expected to purchase the text (Available at the University of Florida Bookstores or at online providers):

- Plowright, D. (2011). Using mixed methods; frameworks for an integrated methodology. Thousand Oaks, CA: Sage.
- Creswell, J. W. & Plano Clark, V. L. (2017). Designing and conducting mixed methods research. (3rd Ed) Thousand Oaks, CA: Sage.

-- Supplementary readings will be assigned.

Class Dynamics:

Class participation is a key component of this course since the social construction of knowledge is a chief expectation from students; this will be achieved through transformative dialogue in the form of online and in-class group discussion and collaborative hands-on experiences. All students are expected to actively participate in the discussion of the assigned readings for the week, discussion board forums, and on the various learning activities planned for the course. In each live session, the instructor will use lectures, discussions, reflective exercises, case studies, and other hands-on activities to help the students acquire and apply the relevant knowledge and skills required for designing and implementing an MMR study. The course instructor will monitor the on-line discussion forums (see: "A note about on-line participation").

Assignments, Dates, Grades, and Feedback:

Full descriptions of each activity/assignment are available within the Assignments and Discussions sections of the course site in Canvas. Please see the section on "A note about written reports" to become familiar with the general instructions for written assignments.

A Note About Online Participation

Students are expected to be active participants in the class web-discussions and face-to-face sessions. The course discussion board provides a venue to increase interaction. Students will post their comments and must also read the postings of others. Failure to be engaged in the sharing of ideas not only limits the value you gain from this course, but also what other may obtain from the course. Each week, students will have to post their material on the Weekly Discussion Board (this must be done by midnight the Friday before the class session where the relevant readings will be discussed). Students are expected to read the posted discussion materials before attending class on Tuesday.

Just like in any social setting, there are sets of expected norms that should guide the different types of interactions that, as a group, we will have in this course. Please read and follow the guidelines included in the Netiquette Guide for Online Courses to ensure that you, and everybody else in this course, has a satisfactory and productive experience as we interact during the semester. That same document also contains relevant information related to privacy and security practices that you must follow.

A Note About Written Reports:

Cite all references using APA style format. APA (American Psychological Association) has a reference manual available at the University of Florida Library and they have information about writing and references on their website, which is <http://www.apa.org/>. The format to be used for papers is double-spacing; one-inch margins, and typed in 12-point font, unless otherwise noted.

A consistent style is used for grading written papers. Primarily, show that you have learned and are able to apply the course material through your writing. In grading, the instructor looks for student's cognitive understanding and application of theories, principles, concepts, ideas, and approaches that have been covered in readings and the course. More detailed rubrics are included in the descriptions of each assignment.

Attendance:

Given the importance of class discussion and participation, it is not possible for a student to perform satisfactorily in the course without regularly contributing to the planned activities and assignments. Students are required to be active in the course throughout the semester. Only documented doctor's excuses or UF-approved activities will be excused.

Lateness Policy:

A 10% per day deduction will be assessed for assignments turned in late. Work more than a week late will not be accepted. This policy will be strictly enforced. All assignment and online discussion deadlines are critical for your individual success in this course and the success of the course overall. If you feel that you will be unable to meet these deadlines, you must communicate this to the course instructor at least one day before the assignment or discussion posting is due.

Grades and Grade Points

For information on current UF policies for assigning grade points, see <https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/current/regulations/info/grades.aspx>

Absences and Make-Up Work

Requirements for class attendance and make-up exams, assignments, and other work are consistent with university policies that can be found at:

<https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/current/regulations/info/attendance.aspx>.

Course Evaluation

Students are expected to provide professional and respectful feedback on the quality of instruction in this course by completing course evaluations online via GatorEvals. Guidance on how to give feedback in a professional and respectful manner is available at <https://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/students/>. Students will be notified when the evaluation period opens and can complete evaluations through the email they receive from GatorEvals, in their Canvas course menu under GatorEvals, or via <https://ufl.bluera.com/ufl/>. Summaries of course evaluation results are available to students at <https://gatorevals.aa.ufl.edu/public-results/>.

Academic Honesty

“UF students are bound by The Honor Pledge which states, “We, the members of the University of Florida community, pledge to hold ourselves and our peers to the highest standards of honor and integrity by abiding by the Honor Code. On all work submitted for credit by students at the University of Florida, the following pledge is either required or implied: “On my honor, I have neither given nor received unauthorized aid in doing this assignment.” The Honor Code (<http://www.dso.ufl.edu/sccr/process/student-conduct-honorcode/>) specifies a number of behaviors that are in violation of this code and the possible sanctions. Furthermore, you are obligated to report any condition that facilitates academic misconduct to appropriate personnel. If you have any questions or concerns, please consult with the instructor or TAs in this class.

Software Use:

All faculty, staff and students of the university are required and expected to obey the laws and legal agreements governing software use. Failure to do so can lead to monetary damages and/or criminal penalties for the individual violator. Because such violations are also against university policies and rules, disciplinary action will be taken as appropriate.

Services for Students with Disabilities

Students with disabilities requesting accommodations should first register with the Disability Resource Center (352-392-8565, www.dso.ufl.edu/drc/) by providing appropriate documentation. Once registered, students will receive an accommodation letter which must be presented to the instructor when requesting accommodation. Students with disabilities should follow this procedure as early as possible in the semester.

In-Class Recording

Students are allowed to record video or audio of class lectures. However, the purposes for which these recordings may be used are strictly controlled. The only allowable purposes are (1) for personal educational use, (2) in connection with a complaint to the university, or (3) as evidence in, or in preparation for, a criminal or civil proceeding. All other purposes are prohibited. Specifically, students may not publish recorded lectures without the written consent of the instructor.

A “class lecture” is an educational presentation intended to inform or teach enrolled students about a particular subject, including any instructor-led discussions that form part of the presentation, and delivered by any instructor hired or appointed by the University, or by a guest instructor, as part of a University of Florida course. A class lecture does not include lab sessions, student presentations, clinical presentations such as patient history, academic exercises involving solely student participation, assessments (quizzes, tests, exams), field trips, private conversations between students in the class or between a student and the faculty or lecturer during a class session.

Publication without permission of the instructor is prohibited. To “publish” means to share, transmit, circulate, distribute, or provide access to a recording, regardless of format or medium, to another person (or persons), including but not limited to another student within the same class section. Additionally, a recording, or transcript of a recording, is considered published if it is posted on or uploaded to, in whole or in part, any media platform, including but not limited to social media, book, magazine, newspaper, leaflet, or third-party note/tutoring services. A student who publishes a recording without written consent may be subject to a civil cause of action instituted by a person injured by the publication and/or discipline under UF Regulation 4.040 Student Honor Code and Student Conduct Code.
